SUMMER SCHOOL

Winchester School of Art's Summer School features two exciting practice-based courses, Photography and Games Design. Photography students will be guided to possible outcomes from exhibitions to books or editorial publication. Games Design students will create games assets and understand user experience, alongside coding skills to bring your games to life.

No prior experience is required for entry — we just ask that you have a creative outlook and an interest in art and design.

Your two-week course, led by academic staff from the University, is designed to challenge you and allow you to explore new creative and intellectual areas.

As a Summer School student you will also have access to the Winchester School of Art library, which boasts an extensive art and design collection. Included in the fee are an escorted visit to London and a more local cultural destination, as well as most meals on tuition days.

For more details, fees and how to apply, please visit the Summer School website or email Craig Wadman:
