This international symposium will question the links between cultural spaces and creative places with the aim of reaching a deeper appreciation of the relationship between culture and creativity at various spatial scales – from the local to the global.

- To what extent do cultural spaces coincide with creative places?
- Does a rich cultural context facilitate or stifle highly creative activity?
- What policy initiatives are required to harness and cultivate the value of cultural spaces?
- To what extent can place specific creative resources be leveraged in global settings for economic and/or political purposes?
- How might we begin to interpret the relations between culture, space, creativity and place in the twenty-first century?
